Further details

Health Education England (HEE) and the Oxford AHSN are extending an invitation to primary care professionals to join our 'Adopting innovation and managing change in healthcare settings' programme. The next cohort will have a particular focus on leading change within primary care settings.

Since it was established in 2016, more than 180 NHS staff have taken part in this support programme for healthcare innovators. You could follow in their footsteps by joining the next programme starting in February 2020. Find out more here.

This free programme helps identify and introduce new ways of improving patient care. It focuses on system change and service integration. Previous participants had a wide range of experience and expertise and came from NHS organisations in Berkshire, Buckinghamshire, Oxfordshire, Surrey, Milton Keynes and Swindon.

Projects developed by them as a result of the course had a significant impact within teams, organisations and systems. You can see what some of those who have completed the programme had to say about it in this short video.

Teaching sessions take place at Buckinghamshire New University's High Wycombe campus. The time commitment is approximately one day per month for a year (two modules, each comprising six study days). Students completing the programme are awarded a Post Graduate Certificate (60 Masters level credits).

The 'Adopting innovation and managing change in healthcare settings' programme is funded by HEE. Participants pay no fees.

The deadline for applications to join the latest programme is 20 January 2020. (Places are limited, applications will close once the cohort is full.)
